

Speaking: Input and Output (CHOLOS AUDIO INTRO SPEAKING)

The base

The best way to understand English is listening and speaking, like a baby. Reading and writing come later.

The goal is to do it for forty minutes every day, which is what a native speaks.

English is learned by socializing and networking. Practice partners can also be contacts or friends.

How to practice

Talking alone is like the punching bag for a boxer. First the form, then the fight.

Then come the dual conversations and the group conversation.

You should always practice alone.

Recording

You always record every day, and more than once a day if you can. A day without recording sets you back 2-3 days, and a week, a month.

Don't re-record. I leave the audio with its errors, so I don't waste time, and in the next one those words come out better.

You always listen to yourself. Almost everyone forgets it.

If you are in basic

10 minutes of reading and 10 minutes of questions and answers. Or five, it depends on the step in the IPC method.

Read it the way I think it sounds, and put the text in the Chrome extension to hear how the words are pronounced.

If you are at the intermediate level

A monologue of 10 to 15 minutes, like a podcast, with the structure of intro, ideas, something else and conclusion.

Send it the first three days to create the habit.

Dual practices

Before, you have to have a background, so you don't bore your partner.
